Manager Comment

January was a risk-off month for global markets. The primary reason was the uncertainty surrounding the Coronavirus. The first of the 59 patients in Hubei province developed symptoms as early as 12 December 2019 and initially there was no clear evidence that there was human-to-human transmission. It was later found that this was not the case, and human-to-human transmission was possible before symptoms were presented. As a result, the Chinese government took the decision to limit movement to and from Hubei and extended the national holiday season. The WHO subsequently declared the virus a public health emergency. Investors pursued safety as the extent of the problem was unknown. Both developed and emerging market equities were down. Developed market equities declined 0.68%, while emerging market equities declined 4.69% (both in USD). Emerging market bonds delivered 2.24%, while global bonds gained 1.31% (both in USD). Global property continued to benefit from the accommodative monetary environment, delivering 0.87% (in USD), while global inflation-linked bonds increased 2.20% (in USD).

After rolling blackouts during the festive season, in January Eskom announced it would resume rolling blackouts in order to perform much needed maintenance on power plants. On the back of this, the World Bank also cut South Africa's 2020 GDP forecast to 0.9% from 1%. There was a welcome reprieve for local consumers as the South African Reserve Bank reduced the repo rate by 25bps, from 6.5% to 6.25%. Despite this, consumer sentiment remained at a two-year low. The local market followed the same trend as its emerging market peers. Equities declined 1.69% (in rands). Financials and resources had a particularly tough month as economic activity in China came to a standstill, and financials were also impacted by the weak local environment; resources and financials declined 3.59% and 5.86% respectively (both in rands). Local bonds were the best performer over the month delivering 1.19% (in rands). Local property declined 3.06%, while inflation-linked bonds delivered 0.01% (both in rands). Cash delivered 0.58% (in rands).
