Manager Comment

The number of global COVID-19 cases climbed past 3 million at the end of April. With markets under significant strain from the pandemic, governments and central banks are working overtime to minimise the risks to financial stability. US oil prices crashed into negative territory for the first time in history caused by the pandemic leaving the world awash with oil and not enough storage capacity. It became apparent in April that the COVID-19 recession is set to outstrip even the more pessimistic of early forecasts of its impact on economic growth. With most of the world on lockdown and a growing realisation that the path to normal might be long, the cost of lost output could total as much as $10 trillion. South Africa's containment measures are some of the most aggressive in the world, delivering a crushing blow to an already ailing economy. The range of consensus forecasts estimates the economy to shrink between 5% and 10% in 2020. President Ramaphosa proposed to reopen the economy gradually according to a series of rolling levels. The president also unveiled a $26 billion (R500 billion) stimulus package and a first ever request for an IMF loan. The fiscal support package is designed to soften the economic impact of the COVID-19 crisis. With unemployment near 30%, informal workers dominate the everyday economy in villages, townships and rural areas. These are the people being worst hit by the lockdown. The mass of South African citizens are going to remain cash strapped and their livelihoods are at risk.

Given the stimulus packages, the MSCI World index rallied some 14.06% in rands, largely driven by the rally in the US equity market. The MSCI EM index lagged its developed market counterparts, rallying some 12.27% in rands. Global bond yields were largely unchanged as investors went back into equities. The Bloomberg Barclays Global Aggregate index underperformed risk assets, albeit delivering positive returns in the order of 4.85% in rands. As bond yields settled and risk sentiment turning positive, developed market property rallied some 10.15% in rands. Despite sentiment turning positive in April, the dollar remained strong and the rand depreciated some 2.75% relative to the dollar. The rising tide lifts all boats, and the local equity market was driven higher as global markets rallied. As such, the ALSI delivered some 13.98% in rands. The rally during the month of April was generally broad based with the Resi-20, Fini-15 and Indi-25 delivering some 22.64%, 12.98% and 9.86% respectively. The property market continued to lag the equity market given the impact of COVID-19 amidst an already weak economic backdrop. The SA listed property market rallied some 7.00% in rands and 4.06% in dollars in April, but has still declined some 44.52% in rands year to date. The movement in short yields was driven down by substantial interest rate cuts, whilst the upward move in yields at the long end reflect the demand for liquidity in the flight to safety in recent months and the country's debt and fiscus position. The Bloomberg Barclays Inflation Linked Bond index rallied some 16.46% in rands and the ALBI delivered some 3.92% in rands. Local cash delivered 0.52% in rands for the month of April.

About the Portfolio Manager

Paul joined Sanlam in 2011 as an investment analyst before being appointed to his current position of Chief Investment Officer in 2013. As CIO, Paul heads up a substantial team of experienced investment professionals in Sanlam's Multi-Management team. As solutions architects, the team performs in-depth macro and manager research that informs the portfolio construction process, which is encompassed within a disciplined framework. Sanlam's multi manager investment team has an exceptional tactical asset allocation track record, giving them a distinct competitive edge.

In his previous capacity as head of research, Paul ensured that the quality of data was high and appropriate for the investment process. His responsibilities included due diligence at a manager level, developing new analysis methods, writing articles and doing research. In his role as portfolio manager, Paul was responsible for client portfolios and making trading and investment decisions.

Before joining Sanlam, Paul fulfilled the roles of head of asset manager research and an investment consultant at Jacques Malan Consultants & Actuaries. He also gained experience as a business analyst at Monocle Solutions and a Quantitative Analyst at RisCura Solutions in 2004.
